

The Manor of Elberton

A Record of Elberton Court Leets

1776 to 1870

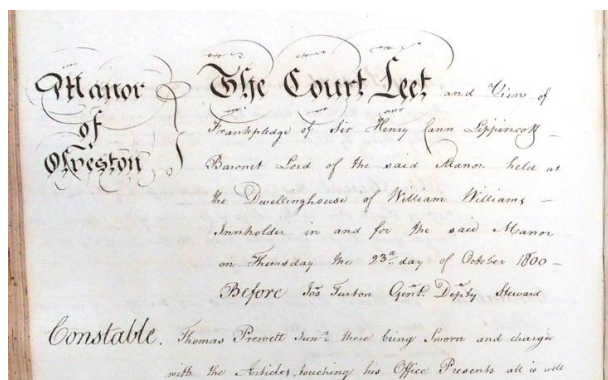

Introduction

Background

Eric Garrett purchased two volumes of records of Court Leet proceedings that were for sale on the internet. They relate to the manors of Olveston and Elberton and cover an 80 year period from 1775 and are a record of the proceedings of the annual manorial Court Leets.

A Court Leet was a local court convened under the authority of the Lord of the Manor to nominate officers such as the Constable and address local civil concerns.

Key characters in the manor are the Lord/Lady of the Manor, the Steward, the Constable, the Tythingman, the Hayward and the Ditchreeve. The court leet was convened every year on a day in October and usually held in the White Hart, Olveston (not mentioned by name but the Innkeeper is identified). A major part of the record is the list of all the householders who were expected to attend the Leet including those excused and those who were fined for non-attendance.

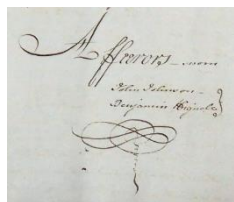

At each Leet a jury of 12 to 16 householders was sworn in under a Foreman. They reviewed all the issues presented to the court and they decided on the level of fines to be imposed if the action they instructed was not carried out in a timely manner. The meeting also appointed the officers for the succeeding year.

When reviewed over several years, the Court Leet records provide a picture of village life, who are the upright characters and who are the rogues and what becomes of the tenancies, as father is followed by son.

The Volumes

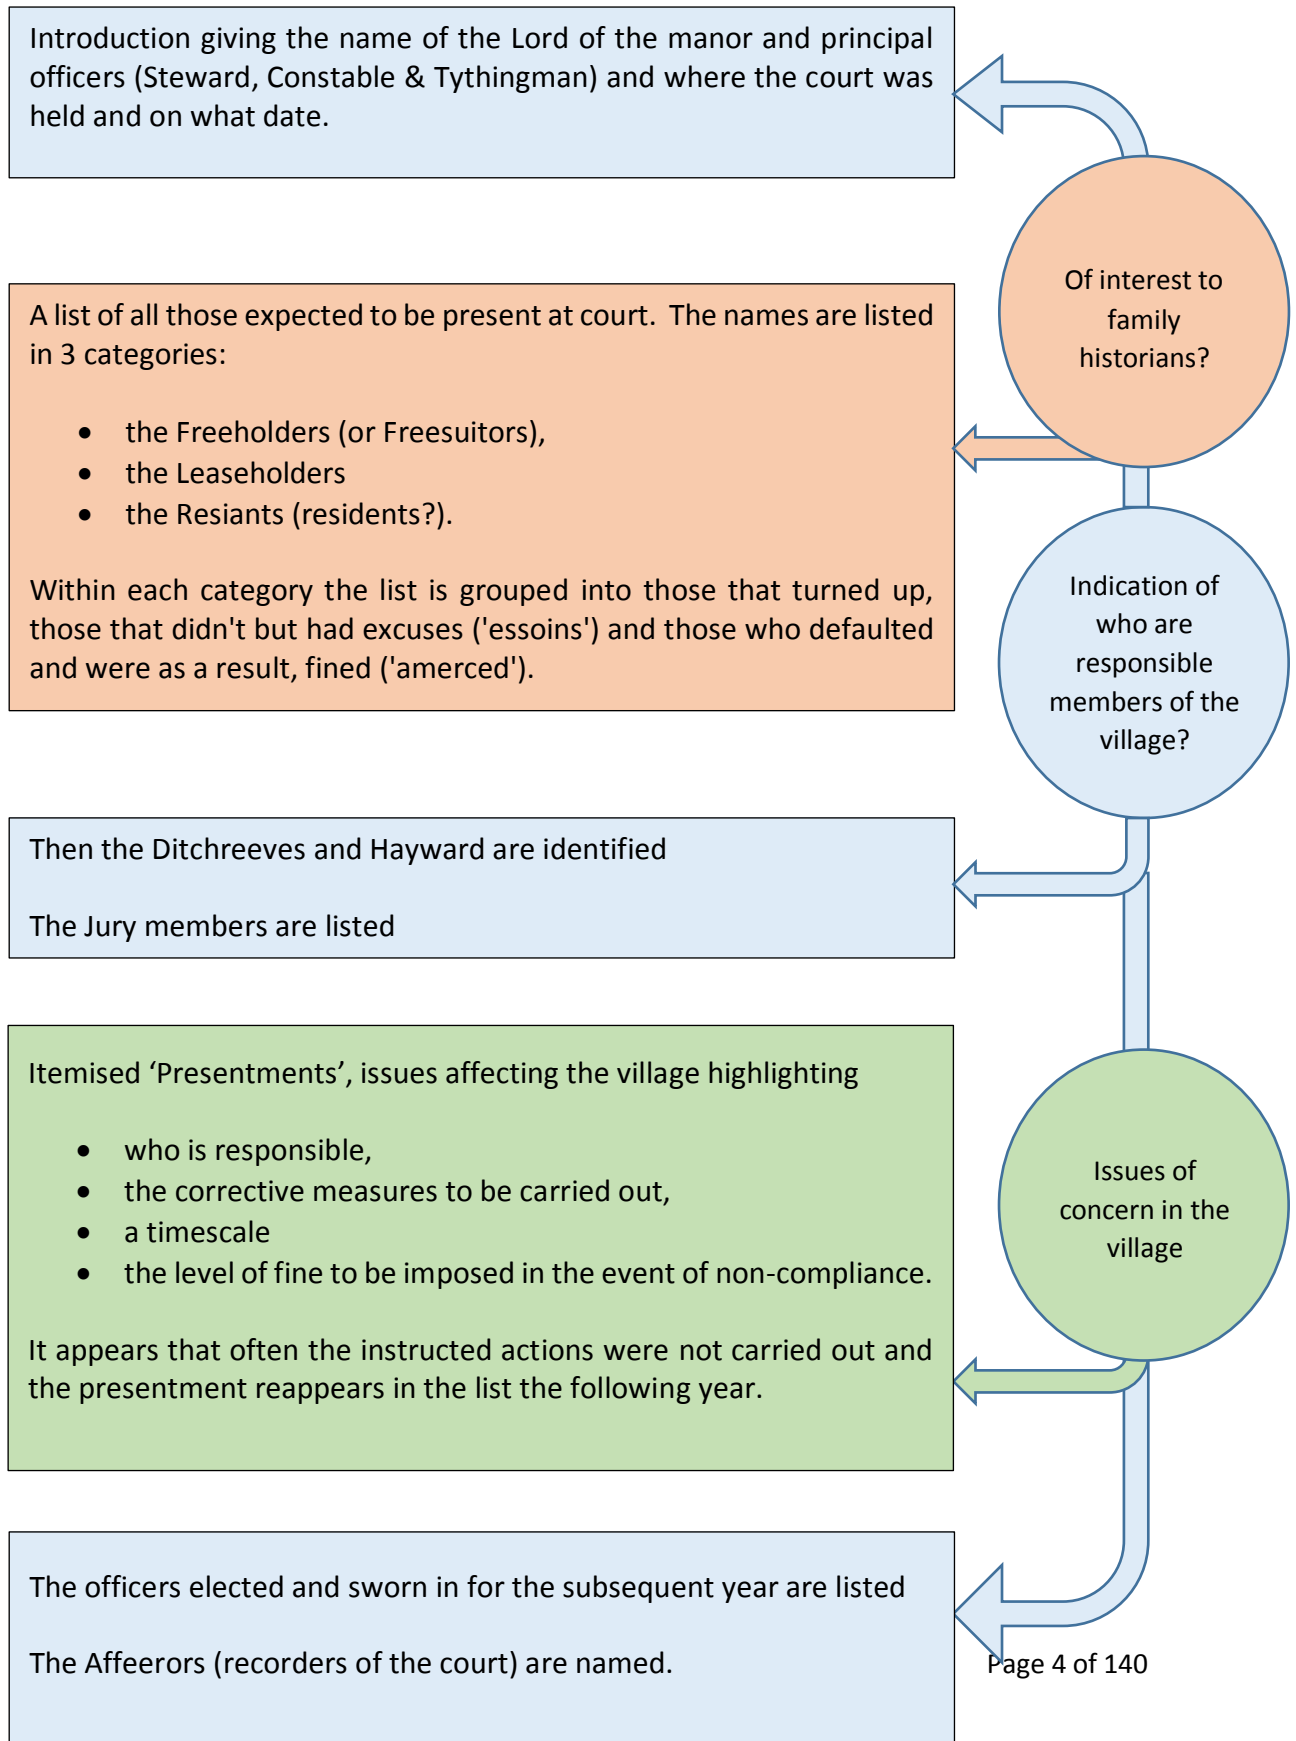

It appears that the volumes were procured in 1775 as record books for the leets of Olveston and Elberton. They are of good quality paper, approximately 200 pages, bound in leather. The leet is recorded in a relatively standard format in 'copper plate' handwriting with frequent embellishments, apparently at the whim of the scribe. It is likely that the scribe was transcribing in fair hand the contemporaneous notes taken in court.

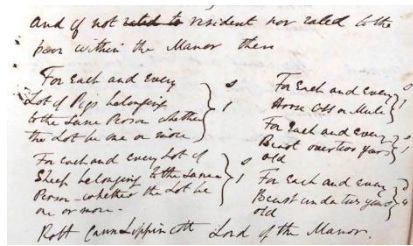

In the Olveston volume there are no record for the years after 1813 except for a single year, 1830 which is the last year recorded in the Olveston volume. A possible explanation for the gap is that the Leet fell into disuse but, after the death of Sir Henry Cann Lippincott in 1829, it was revived by the guardians of his son Robert (who was 12 years old in 1830). There is a somewhat similar gap in the records for Elberton manor which would support this explanation (rather than a loss of pages from the book).

The Contents of a Court Leet record

The Court Leet records follow a standard format as shown below. The type of information in each of the standard sections of interest to social historians is indicated.

In the Elberton volume the later leet records are no longer carefully transcribed but written in flowing hand (perhaps by the lord of the manor himself?). This observation and the reduced numbers of Presentments are perhaps further indications that the Court Leets were becoming less important. Over time, the local authorities took on increasing responsibility for the drainage, road verges etc.

The Transcription Project

With Eric's enthusiastic agreement, a project was initiated to transcribe the content of the volumes so that the information within could be readily available to members and perhaps a wider public interested in researching community life in this period. A team of volunteers was recruited.

Every page of the two volumes was digitally photographed and given a nominal page number. Each transcriber was assigned a particular year to transcribe (3 or 4 pages) and was sent the relevant photographs to work from. The finished transcripts were returned in Word format by the transcriber who annotated the text with any queries. Note, the photographed page numbers corresponding to the transcribed year are shown in [brackets] at the head of each page.

The next step was to format the texts into chapters, each dealing with a ten year period. Names were cross-checked with other years and an index of householders was compiled.

Transcribers and Proof-readers

The transcribers and proof-readers have given their time to work on the court leets throughout the period of the Covid-19 epidemic in 2020.

OPHS is very grateful for the time and effort put in by the following transcribers and proof-readers:

What did we learn?

Drainage was a serious concern of the Court – keeping ditches clear and gouts (sluices) in good order. Also cutting back hedges and trees. Latterly the control of livestock in the common areas was mentioned annually. Highlights for our transcribers were dangerous quarries and foul waste from overflowing drains!

Note on this chapter

The Court Leet records transcribed in this chapter are much briefer than earlier: the Resiants are not listed and the Presentments concern only the control of stray animals. After 1830 the only officer appointed is the Hayward.

However, the content of the chapter is supplemented by the transcription of some additional documents 'tucked into' the back of the volume, consisting, usually, of the 'Jury Presentments' (the contemporaneous notes of the Leet which sometimes are signed by the jurors), the Precept (a summoning notice for the court) and a handwritten list of persons – with those present ticked off.

There are a number of missing years but 1859 to 1870 forms an almost continuous sequence.

A comparison of scripting

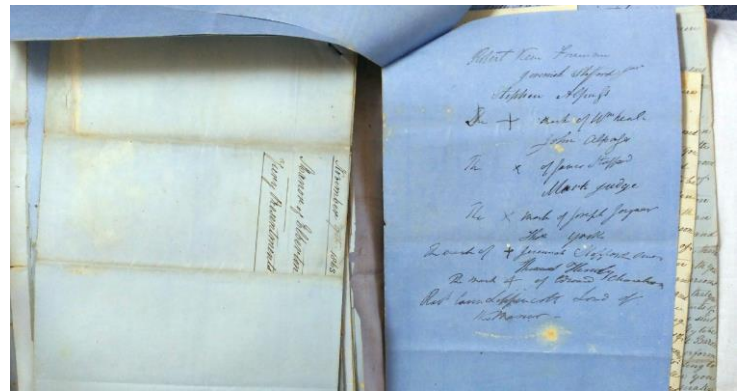

From 1806

From 1869 (Robert Cann Lippincott's handwriting)

The example of handwriting in 1869 is typical of the years after 1820.

At the end, the book has been used as a source of notepaper!

The additional documents dating from the period 1859 to 1870 inserted at back of the volume included the originals of the Precept summoning the Court, lists of jurors who were summoned and the original copy of the Jury Presentments signed by the jurors.
